Since spring of 2020, we have placed an increased priority on communication with prospective and current families. Continuous dialogue with our families is pivotal in providing them with the confidence and care necessary as we all navigate the impact of the pandemic on our communities. With a focus on recruitment, we recently revamped our enrollment webpage to demonstrate a focus on our schools being in Brooklyn, which helps families to connect with the value of a high-quality local option in response to uncertainties related to public transportation or even the availability of school busing. With a focus on retention, we have equipped our schools to take the lead with personalized/decentralized communications with families. This provides the necessary, relevant information to families of our campuses from the school leaders with whom they are directly familiar. These personalized communications included school-based W x webpage as well as frequent family newsletters with pertinent updates on our school model and resources we are providing to ensure that all students are

Since the spring, we have enhanced our digital marketing efforts to ensure that we are reaching families where they are -- in their homes. In sharing information with our families, we now allow for our website to translate automatically with one click of a button, which makes that information immediately accessible to non-English speaking families. Ascend's commitment to attracting all students, including those with disabilities, English language learners/Multilingual learners, and students who are economically disadvantaged encourages us to pursue and improve on various traditional paid advertising methods, including MTA bus and subway ads, billboards, print advertisements in local newspaper and newsletters, direct mail pieces, and flyers. These materials are regularly translated into Spanish, Haitian Creole and Bengali to increase accessibility for non-English speaking families in our communities. Our data show that most new families hear about Ascend via word of mouth. Therefore, we equip our families with the tools needed to share Ascend with their family members, neighbors and friends so that there is a personal story behind advertisements that prospective families encounter -- online or in print.

As public health guidelines allow, our staff members will continue our partnership with local community organizations to access families in our community to: (1) learn their unique needs and (2) ensure that Ascend's model is responsive. These personalized communications included school-based W x webpage as well as frequent family newsletters with pertinent updates on our school model and resources we are providing to ensure that all students are successful whether learning remotely or in-person.
