Greetings from Associate Commissioner Elisa Alvarez

Dear Colleagues,

The season of gratitude and thanksgiving is upon us. The journey of life is one filled with life-long-lessons. For the responsibilities you carry in educating our future leaders, researchers, aerospace engineers, physicians, and university professors, I begin by thanking all of you for accepting this calling of advocacy in education.

As educators and advocates for multilingual learners, including English Language Learners and world language scholars, I find sharing our stories to be powerful and liberating. Many often say that our language—our bilingualism—is our superpower, and I agree. Inviting our students and families to fill the pages of a notepad, or type on a laptop, as we now live in a technological world, will allow others to experience the world through their eyes. A sense of belonging and acceptance emerges when our teachers intentionally present the opportunity for the students to share their authentic experiences, coupled with the rich literature that highlights our various cultures of the human race.

I was recently asked two very interesting questions: “Why is your work so important to you?” and “How has being truly bilingual aided you in your personal and professional life?” Responding to these questions was a nice moment that allowed me to stop and reflect on the power of my bilingualism. My work means that I have the ability and obligation to defend the rights of others, others that look and sound like myself and my family. This is about all immigrant families, who work to achieve the best quality of life that affords peace and respect.

My bilingualism has also allowed me to experience moments that have helped define me, that continue to inspire me to learn, to become vulnerable and witness the success that is possible. Our work helps build the foundation in every young scholar that allows them to achieve and live within a world that reflects their own beauty.

Our children and their families have so much to contribute. Thank you for brightening the platforms that allow them to do so.

Wishing you all a peaceful Thanksgiving season.

In unity,

Elisa Alvarez

European Day of Languages 2022

The European Union National Institutes for Culture (EUNIC) dedicated their 2022 European Day of Languages on September 30th to the New York State Seal of Biliteracy. Hosted by the Goethe Institut of New York and sponsored by the New York State Education Department and the New York City Department of Education, this networking event was part conference, part information fair, and was attended by more than 150 educators, professionals, and exhibitors from around the globe.

The day included several panel discussions with various stakeholders from educational institutions that work with the Seal of Biliteracy, each presenting their perspective on the importance of developing students with biliteracy and bicultural skills. Panels were followed by a series of concurrent sessions by presenters from all over the state, highlighting the support services provided by various institutions for language learning. One such support is the development of a Wakelet for the Seal. On this Wakelet, teachers, students, and families can access general resources for the Seal, as well as language-specific resources to support learning.

Regent Luis O. Reyes

Following lunch, Regent Luis O. Reyes of the NYS Board of Regents shared how the NYS Seal of Biliteracy has grown from just under 250 students in its first year (2015-16) to more than 7,000 students in 2021-22. Regent Reyes went on to advocate for our English Language Learners (ELLs), who are ideal candidates for the Seal, stating that “ELLs, both current and former, are particularly well-poised to earn the Seal, since they already speak a language other than English. The number of current ELLs who earned the Seal increased significantly in the last two years, up 130% in 2020-21 and up over 70% in 2021-22.”

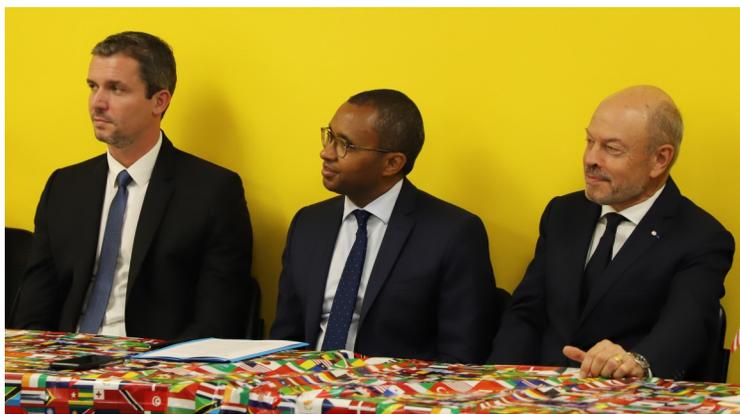

Dr. Ron Woo, Executive Director of the NYS Statewide Language Regional Bilingual Education Resource Network (RBERN)

Throughout the day, attendees were able to interact with various exhibitors representing organizations that support world language instruction, including various cultural institutes.

NY French American Charter School Building Inaugurated with Visit from French Minister of Education

The New York French American Charter School (NYFACS) was the first bilingual Franco-American public charter school in the United States. Founded in 2010, the school was established to address the needs of francophone communities of New York City, including the Little Senegal section of Harlem, where NYFACS is located. Its mission is to develop bilingual, biliterate global citizens who will be the leaders of tomorrow. At present a Prekindergarten through 8th grade school, NYFACS boasts a diverse student body and native French-speaking teachers from the francophone global community.

On Monday, September 19, 2022, the new middle school building of the New York French American Charter School was inaugurated by Pap Ndiaye, French Minister of National Education and Youth. Minister Ndiaye shared that “French is the language of the future. In 2050, the French-speaking world (la Francophonie) will include over 700 million people who speak French at home.” An embodiment of this himself, Minister Ndiaye is the product of a French mother and a Senegalese father. In his remarks at this event, he shared the critical role that bilingual education plays in providing equitable access for all to a high-quality education that develops learners with 21st century skills, including students who can communicate in multiple languages and with intercultural competence.

Manuella Gatia, grade 7 student and one of two student speakers at the inauguration

Dr. Bertrand Tchoumi, NYFACS principal

Additional comments were offered by NYFACS’ principal, Dr. Bertrand Tchoumi, leaders within the New York City Department of Education, and other NYFACS staff members. Several students gave testimonials regarding their school in both English and French.

Principal Tchoumi spoke of his students in the following way: “Our students are citizens of the world. From the youngest students and throughout all grades, we instill the notion of respect and curiosity for different cultures. Children who learn in the bilingual environment of NYFACS gain a unique perspective on the world and are prepared for the complex, multicultural environment of tomorrow.

Following the inaugural presentation, M. Ndiaye unveiled an inauguration plaque and attendees were treated to a tour of the school, accompanied by a traditional drumming demonstration by students, pictured here on the right.

Implementing Social Emotional Learning for ELLs' Well-being and Academic Success

While the number of English Language Learners (ELLs) within New York State has increased by around 1.8% (3% out of New York City) in the last decade, the academic gap between ELLs and their non-ELL peers has remained relatively constant. ELLs may experience various stressors including acculturation, English proficiency expectations, the trauma of immigration, discrimination, bullying, and socio-economic disadvantage. Student well-being including social and emotional, physical, and cognitive capacities needs to be centralized in sustainable education. Research has shown that social-emotional competencies positively impact mental health and academic performance. Cognitive development and social emotional learning (SEL) are intertwined to help students build the competencies for college and career readiness and civic life.

How do we implement SEL to ensure ELLs' academic success and well-being? The first principle in teaching should be the integration of academic, social, and emotional learning. Besides curriculum, flexible and achievable practices should be developed and implemented continuously and consistently in instructional and non-instructional spaces. Whole child support, family engagement, school support, and community involvement are essential components of SEL for ELLs. A growing number of SEL frameworks encompass a whole school approach to strengthening SEL through authentic and equitable partnerships between schools, families, and communities.

The following core practices are recommended for to support SEL of ELLs and also of the educators that support them.

Inside School Practices

Addressing ELLs' Needs and Interests

- Build knowledge of ELLs' linguistic and social-emotional background.
- Understand the language demands inherent in each SEL task.
- Develop scaffolding for SEL instruction to enable ELLs to successfully participate in independent and class activities.

Implementing Culturally and Linguistically Responsive-Sustaining Education

- Set high expectations and provide rigorous, adaptive instructions.
- Involve parents and students in curriculum design to affirm a sense of identity & dignity for an inclusive learning and social environment.

Prioritizing Project-Based Learning (PBL)

- Use mindful reflections on thoughts, emotions, and behaviors in independent and group PBL work to develop assertiveness, empathy, critical thinking skills, and a growth mindset with positive attitudes.
- Apply compassionate communication practices in PBL teamwork to foster responsible decision-making, build a self-agency in learning, and establish mutually supportive relationships.

Outside School Practices

Implementing Consistent SEL in Out-of-School Time (OST) Programs

- Provide guidance on leveraging OST programs (e.g., after-school and summer programs) to accelerate SEL in a manner that is aligned with inside school practices.
- Offer a continuum of care for all ELLs in need of support with additional SEL support services provided as needed.
- Build multiple connections with students, families, and communities.

Building Youth Positive Program

- Facilitate strength-based and aspiration-oriented youth development (e.g., college-career aspiration project).
- Collaborate with community health organizations to help ELLs evaluate their SEL well-being and receive support to address any needs identified.

Enhancing Family Involvement

- Initiate a dual capacity-building framework for family engagement and collaboration between teachers and parents in terms of capacities in confidence, cognition, and connections.
- Reduce family social isolation/exclusion through collective parent engagement and family support.

Developing Capacity Among Adult Stakeholders

Building Transformative Leadership

- Establish a shared vision and mission for SEL.
- Build consensus and commitment to SEL among all educators.
- Distribute decision making power across all stakeholders.

Strengthening Social-Emotional Skills

- Provide workshops for adults (e.g., educators, parents, community service providers) to learn SEL competencies.
- Build learning communities and/or co-teaching workgroups to develop adult emotion regulation and interpersonal skills, modeling for students.
- Align learning activities with the Collaborative for Academic, Social, and Emotional Learning (CASEL) five core competencies of SEL: self-awareness, self-management, social awareness, relationship skills, and responsible decision-making.

Expanding Adult SEL Capacity (Cognition, Curriculum/Instruction, and Collaboration)

- Understand the role of SEL in preparing ELLs for college, career, and civic life, the inclusion of ELLs in general education classrooms, language acquisition, academic motivation and engagement.
- Provide professional development for teachers on SEL practices.
- Provide workshops on collaborative strategies for teachers and parents to promote interprofessional collaboration and learning.

Evaluation and Improvement

- Apply the Plan-Do-Study-Act (PDSA) quick circle method to scale up and scale out capacities.
- Assess ELLs' social-emotional skills through formative assessment, emphasizing the process to inform improvement.
- Consider multi-source assessments from students, parents, and teachers that predict more accurate results.

Resources Available to All Educators

As the school year moves forward, the Office of Bilingual Education and World Languages (OBEWL) wants to reshare our educator tools and supports to help both teachers and their ELL students experience a successful 2022-2023. Our office works with numerous experts who specialize in language acquisition and instruction for English Language Learners to present the educators of New York State useful and timely tools to support their pedagogy and ultimately assist in allowing ELLs to realize their full potential not only in English but also in their home language and within all content areas.

We hope these resources will be helpful during the new school year, and we invite each of you to reach out for more information on pedagogy by visiting OBEWL online or contacting your local Regional Bilingual Education Resource Network \(RBERN\).

Advanced Literacies

This series of eight topic briefs produced for NYSED by Nonie K. Lesaux, Ph.D. and Emily Phillips Galloway, Ed.D. are designed to aid educators in implementing the NYS Next Generation Learning Standards. Topics include Advanced Literacies for Academic Success, Effective Reading Comprehension, Spotlight on Academic Vocabulary, and Language Production Projects.

Quality Education for English Language Learners/Multilingual Learners

The following briefs, prepared for the Office of Bilingual Education and World languages by WestEd, cover the topic of quality education for ELLs through peer-to-peer interaction and working with complex texts. Topics include Quality Student Interactions, De-Mystifying Complex Texts, Proximal Development, and Understanding the Importance of the First Language in Second Language Learning.

Scaffolding Instruction for English Language Learners

In association with American Institutes for Research (AIR), OBEWL has developed this series of scaffolds from Prekindergarten to tenth grade with a focus on vocabulary development and background knowledge. These ELL and ML supports will also provide a framework to assist educators in the use of these strategies and routines when creating their own lessons.

Integrating Science and Language for All Students with a Focus on English Language Learners

This series of seven topic briefs was created for New York State Education Department (NYSED) by New York University (NYU) researchers Drs. Okhee Lee, Lorena Llosa, Alison Haas, and Scott Grapin to promote the implementation of New York State P-12 Science Learning Standards and build the instructional capacity of ELL and science educators with a focus on providing instruction for ELLs.

Bilingual Education Resources: Supporting and Sustaining Initiative

This series of resources for educators produced by the CUNY-New York State Initiative on Emergent Bilinguals was a collaborative project of the Research Institute for the Study of Language in Urban Society (RISLUS) and the Ph.D. Program in Urban Education. Topics include Understanding, Validating, and Building on the Language Practices of Emergent Multilingual Learners (EMLs) in Prekindergarten and Developing Biliteracy in Dual Language Classrooms through Culturally and Linguistically Sustaining Literature.

Co-Teaching in the Integrated ENL Classroom

The following offerings authored by Maria Dove, Ed.D. and Andrea Honingsfeld, Ed.D. include charts, professional development presentations and scholarly articles that focus on the art of co-teaching for the integrated ELL classroom. Topics include Seven Co-Teaching Models, Collaboration and Co-Teaching, and The Collaborative Instructional Cycle.

Seymour Dual Language Academy

By James Nieves, Principal

Seymour Dual Language Academy is an elementary school in the Syracuse City School District. It is located on the west side of the city, offering our community and families a unique and special program in the region. Currently, there are approximately 500 students enrolled from grades PK to fifth grade. Seymour embraces and celebrates cultural diversity and promotes a sense of belonging embedded in a strong family environment. We believe that our students in the dual language program will be bilingual, biliterate, multicultural, and demonstrate high academic achievement that prepares them to compete and be successful in a global society.

Seymour offers a sequential and simultaneous model of instruction. In kindergarten, first grade, and for the first half of their second grade, students receive language arts in their language of dominance (ELA or SLA) and the second language is slowly introduced. The second semester of second grade, our students switch from a sequential model to a simultaneous model where students receive language arts in both Spanish and English.

We recently started highlighting and promoting our dual language program in a monthly newsletter that is being sent out to the Syracuse City School District, to inform them about our unique model of instruction. Our newsletter shares exciting news about student learning and academic achievement, culture inclusion and celebration, and promotes the importance and advantage of becoming bilingual, multilingual and biliterate. We have our team of “Ambassadors” (Dual language teachers and coaches) who work on the newsletter. This team of Ambassadors is led by Erica Daniels, ENL coach and Lillian Zayas, Dual Language coach.

Regional Bilingual Education Resource Network Staff Retreat

This October, the staff from all regions of our RBERN teams joined OBEWL in Albany for a staff retreat. During this in-person opportunity for statewide collaboration and support, the teams presented on the important work from each region and introduced the team to new members.

One of the on-going projects our teams focused on during this retreat was our statewide Strategic Planning Work Groups. These groups have been formed to address many statewide needs in the coming years. These Strategic Planning Work Groups are focusing on key areas: Co-Teaching for ELLs, CTE and the Digital Age of Teaching for ELLs, DEI and the CR-SE Framework, ELL Graduation Rates, ELLs with Disabilities, Immigrant Students, and Dynamic Instruction for ELLs Across the Content Areas.

These Strategic Planning Work Groups are comprised of RBERN team members from across regions as well as OBEWL team members to address statewide initiatives. Meeting at regular intervals, these groups are moving the work forward to create materials to support our students in the key areas. Group members will also utilize the statewide website, New York State RBERN On Demand, to record and share new resources asynchronously with leaders and educators statewide. Please visit this site to view our resources.

Associate Commissioner Elisa Alvarez (standing) works with members of the RBERN team to further develop strategic planning to support multilingual learners.

American Association of Teachers of Italian Distinguished Service Award 2022

The American Association of Teachers of Italian (AATI) has selected Greece CSD Italian teacher Ida Wilder as the 2022 recipient of the Distinguished Service Award for K-12 Teaching. This award aims to recognize AATI members for distinguished service to the Association as well as notable teaching and/or published scholarship in the fields of Italian language, literature, cinema, culture, and civilization. The award consists of a plaque and lifetime membership in the AATI and is presented under the auspices of the AATI Selection Committee at the Association's annual convention.

Ms. Wilder has taught the Italian language and culture in the same school district for 43 years. To both her students and her colleagues, she is an inspiration, opening their eyes to the beauty of Italy's language and culture and encouraging both students and adults to visit, study, and live in Italy. Ms. Wilder is not only an animated teacher in the classroom, but has also led 40 student trips to Italy including student exchanges with cities such as Bologna and Pescara. In 1994, her outstanding achievement in teaching was recognized via the New York State Association for Language Teachers (NYSALFT) Ruth E. Wesley Distinguished Teacher Award.

In addition to the more than four decades of classroom instruction in Italian at the Greece Central School District, Ms. Wilder has also served as an adjunct instructor of Italian at various Rochester-area colleges for more than 20 years. She is committed to the preparation of the next generation of Italian teachers through World Language Methods courses and by serving as a cooperating teacher. This commitment to the teaching profession is also evident through her long-standing participation in professional organizations, including as AATI, NYSAFLT, Italian Teachers Association of Central New York (ITACNY) and National Italian American Foundation (NIAF). Finally, Ms. Wilder has been a College Board consultant for Italian for 16 years and continues to be involved in the development of the AP Italian Language course and exam. She has also been an instructor of the AP Italian Summer Institute for 16 years and is a frequent presenter at the regional, state, and national levels.

Countdown to the Launch of the Revised NYS Learning Standards for World Languages

Are you a world language educator looking for ideas to help you begin the transition to the revised standards in anticipation of implementation beginning in September 2023? Look no further. NYSED is proud to present the "Countdown to the Launch of the Revised NYS Learning Standards for World Languages", outlining concrete steps that teachers can take right now to prepare themselves for a successful implementation of the revised NYS Learning Standards for World Languages. Offering a multiple of suggestions for teachers, this document also provides a suggested monthly study plan to guide teachers through the process and to make it manageable.
